Session 1: Friday General Session

Welcome by Howard F. Wilkins III ("Chip"), 2015-2016 Chair, Environmental Law Section, Remy Moose Manley LLP. Introduction by K. Eric Adair, Hinson, Gravelle & Adair LLP, Valencia. Keynote presentation by Jonathan B. Jarvis, Director, National Park Service

Jonathan B. Jarvis

Jonathan B. Jarvis's 37-year career has taken him from ranger to resource management specialist to park biologist to superintendent of parks. Before being confirmed as the 18th Director of the National Park Service on September 24, 2009, Jarvis served as regional director of the bureau's Pacific West Region. As Director, Jarvis has reinvigorated the National Park Service's role as an international advocate for protected areas and recognized world leader in cultural and natural resource management. As the National Park Service celebrates its centennial in 2016, Jarvis is focused on several key areas for the future: enhancing stewardship of the places entrusted to the Service's care; maximizing the educational potential of parks and programs; engaging new generations and audiences; and ensuring the welfare and fulfillment of National Park Service employees.

Session 2: The Rising Trend of Comprehensive Environmental Enforcement in California: Latest Developments in Administrative, Civil and Criminal Actions

This panel will discuss the latest trends and developments regarding environmental enforcement throughout California. Our speakers, leading representatives from the local, state and federal levels, will address the full spectrum of enforcement options, from administrative orders, to civil enforcement, including the imposition of injunctive and consent judgment terms, to the criminal prosecution of environmental crimes. This panel will also include a presentation from the defense/regulated community perspective, detailing how the regulated community can best understand and implement strategies to minimize enforcement risks as well as insights on dealing with enforcement agencies and prosecutors once an action has been filed or is being investigated.

Brett Morris, Office of the Attorney General, Oakland

Sylvia Quast, Regional Counsel, Environmental Protection Agency, San Francisco

Friday, October 21 | 9:15-10:45 am

1.5 Hours MCLE

Session 3: Oil and Gas Production and Use in California: Past, Present and Future

This panel will include a brief examination of California's past regulatory history of oil and gas production and use. The discussion will also focus on present day issues such as land use conflicts (e.g., Porter Ranch, underground injection's effect on water supplies, well stimulation treatments (WST), waste water disposal) and the attitudes, activism and varying approaches playing out in different parts of the State. The panel also will address the future of the legal mechanisms and regulatory efforts which will set the tone for the years to come (e.g., gas storage regulations, underground injection control (UIC) regulations, WST regulations), and examine the difficult task of reconciliation of hydrocarbon recovery with climate change response goals.

Session 4: Storage, Conservation and System Optimization: What Is Most Needed for California's Future?

California's quest for new water requires developing a diverse portfolio of water sources for the future. The passage of Proposition 1 in 2014 buoyed the prospects for new water storage above and below ground, and also provided funds for water conservation. Measures employed to respond to California's recent drought have demonstrated that California can conserve significantly more water than previously thought possible. Reoperation of existing dams can also increase storage for drier times. With all the gains possible from conservation and changes in reservoir management, is new storage necessary? If so, where should it be located and what kind of storage is appropriate? This panel will explore the conundrum of determining the right mix of investments to best meet the state's current and future water demands considering current legal and funding hurdles.

Session 5: Proposition 65: Recent Developments and Regulatory Reforms

Proposition 65 is 30 years old, but until recently, it has spawned surprisingly few published opinions because the vast majority of cases have settled. In recent years, there have been some novel litigation strategies and published opinions that have significantly changed the Proposition 65 landscape. At the same time, there are pending revisions to the Proposition 65 regulations that could affect state oversight of settlements, provide additional guidance on warning language, and establish new safe harbor levels for certain chemicals. Additionally, recent amendments to the federal Toxic Substances Control Act (TSCA) may have impacts on Proposition 65. This panel will discuss these recent developments. Panelists include lawyers who have been directly involved in recent Proposition 65 litigation and regulatory reforms.

Session 6: California's Clean Energy and Pollution Reduction Act of 2015: What's Next for SB 350?

Over one year has passed since SB 350 was signed into law, codifying significant new targets for renewable energy and energy efficiency in California. This panel will discuss the progress the CPUC, CEC, and CARB have made toward implementing the bill's requirements for a 50% RPS, doubling of energy efficiency, and incentivizing transportation electrification as well as what the regulatory implementation of SB 350 will look like. In addition, while the mandate for a 50% reduction in petroleum use originally proposed by the authors of SB 350 was not ultimately enacted, how are the agencies using existing law and other provisions of SB 350 to nevertheless move towards Governor Brown's goal of significantly reducing petroleum use in the transportation sector? Panelists will address what they anticipate to be the likely direct effects—good and bad—of the bill on renewable energy development, natural resources, and greenhouse gas emission rates, within the state of California.

Session 7: The California Supreme Court and Environmental Law

The California Supreme Court, perhaps the most influential state Supreme Court in the nation, currently has 22 environmental cases pending and has decided four CEQA cases in the past year. More than ever before in its history, the Court has the potential to alter the legal landscape of state environmental law. This panel will examine the Court's recent and pending decisions, identify trends in the types of cases that the court is taking and its decisions, and offer observations about the apparent direction of the Court.

Session 8: Irrigated Lands and the Challenge of Improving Groundwater Quality

Agriculture and related businesses are a significant part of California's economy, environment and culture. California's 20th Century water projects and engineering improvements have made the desert literally bloom in many parts of the state. But irrigation unavoidably contributes nutrients, salts and other pollutants to California's rivers, streams, and groundwater aquifers. This panel will discuss and evaluate how California's thirteen year-old Irrigated Lands Regulatory Program is doing, as agencies, agriculture, and community stakeholders work to apply the state's anti-degradation policy to irrigated lands in the wake of AGUA v. Central Valley Regional Water Quality Control Board.

Session 9: Flint—Could it Happen Here? Is it Happening Here?

California is ahead of many states in terms of having infrastructure in place to help guarantee safe drinking water for all Californians—it was the first state to explicitly recognize a human right to safe, clean, affordable, and accessible drinking water. Yet disadvantaged communities across the State still face daunting challenges. Panelists will discuss clean drinking water concerns facing California communities, what is being done to address those concerns, and whether California is en route to becoming another Flint, Michigan.

Session 10: The Emerging Importance of Methane in Greenhouse Gas Regulation

Methane has been referred to as CO2's "nasty little brother" in terms of climate impacts, but it took center stage in 2016 with the Aliso Canyon gas leak. The leak forced the evacuation of hundreds of people in the Porter Ranch development, was for several months California's single biggest greenhouse gas emissions source, and spurred multiple proposals for legislative action to regulate methane emissions. These developments come on top of heightened scrutiny from regulators over the past few years as the result of methane's potential contribution to global warming. California is targeting methane as part of its short-lived climate pollutant reduction strategy, and the Obama administration has been moving forward with new regulations on methane emissions from the oil and gas sector. This panel will address all of these developments and discuss methane's role as the "pollutant du jour" in the fight against global climate change.

Session 12: The Bay-Delta Water Quality Control Plan: Lodestar or Overload?

Currently, the State Water Project and the federal Central Valley Project backstop the flows needed to meet Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta Water Quality Control Plan flow objectives for salinity and fish and wildlife. Meeting the objectives can be a major constraint on water deliveries, yet Delta fisheries are in decline. The State Water Resources Control Board is now updating the Plan in a process that could apportion responsibility beyond the two projects. This panel seeks to offer insight into the fascinating intersection of water quality and water right laws and the critical and potentially contentious issues confronting update efforts.

Session 13: Vapor Intrusion: Current Regulatory Status and Implications of the New Short-Term Trichloroethylene (TCE) Screening Levels

Vapor intrusion has become a major driver at hazardous waste sites throughout California and has impacted both environmental clean-ups and real estate transactions. In particular, the USEPA Region 9 policy on short-term exposures to trichloroethylene (TCE) in indoor air has led to increased scrutiny of site investigations and, in some cases, has accelerated remediation activities. This panel will discuss the recent changes in USEPA policy regarding vapor intrusion and in particular how the emphasis on short term TCE exposures has changed how sites are prioritized and investigated. Perspectives will be provided by all sides of the vapor intrusion discussion including both the regulatory and regulated community.

Session 18: Saturday General Session

Introduction by Osha Meserve, Soluri Meserve, Sacramento

Keynote presentation by Barbara Boxer, U.S. Senator of California.

Barbara Boxer—U.S. Senator of California

Barbara Boxer

A forceful advocate for families, children, consumers, the environment and her State of California, Barbara Boxer became a United States Senator in January 1993 after 10 years in the House of Representatives and six years on the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

Throughout her career, Senator Boxer has worked to defend our nation's environmental laws, protect our natural heritage and address the threats of climate change. She was the first woman to Chair the Senate's Committee on Environment and Public Works (EPW), a position that she held from 2007 through 2014. She now serves as that Committee's Ranking Member.

Her leadership on the EPW Committee was instrumental in reauthorizing and updating the highway bill and the Water Resources Development Act, both of which have led to significant improvements in our nation's transportation infrastructure and supported millions of jobs nationwide.

Senator Boxer has won numerous awards for her efforts to create a cleaner, healthier environment and for her dedicated work to address the threats of climate change. She has fought to remove arsenic from drinking water and authored an amendment ensuring that drinking water standards protect children. She has led efforts in Congress to protect California's coast from offshore oil drilling and fought to end the unethical use of human subjects in pesticide testing by federal agencies.

Session 21: CEQA and the People’s Voice: Developer Ballot Measures

Following the Supreme Court’s 2014 Tuolumne Jobs decision, which held that CEQA does not apply to “citizen-sponsored” initiatives, even where the initiative is adopted by local officials rather than the voters, California has seen a sharp increase in development projects being proposed via ballot. Panelists will discuss emerging issues surrounding this “Tuolumne tactic.”

Session 22: The Coastal Act at 40 and the State of the California Coastal Commission

The California Coastal Commission has had a remarkable year, starting with the controversial removal of Executive Director Charles Lester in early February and followed by the introduction of several bills in the state legislature addressing agency function. The Commission is also faced with increasingly important substantive work under the Coastal Act, including support of implementation of Local Coastal Programs across the state in a way that addresses sea level rise and climate change impacts, ensuring public beach access with their relatively new enforcement authority, and regulation of new ocean industries like desalination plants and offshore renewables. This panel will offer a recap of relevant coastal legislation and an insight into the biggest battles involving the Coastal Act in the coming year.

Session 23: Recent Developments at California Air Districts

There have been significant new political and regulatory developments at California’s Air Districts over the past year. The South Coast saw a major political shift on its Board of Directors, which resulted in the removal of its longtime executive officer, and it was drawn into litigation alleging that the Board’s recent regulatory amendments were too lenient on industry. In contrast, the Bay Area adopted a suite of stringent new regulations for oil refineries that resulted in legal challenges from industry. The San Joaquin Valley has been active as well, advocating for changes to the Federal Clean Air Act to help it address some of the nation’s worst smog problems. This panel will discuss these developments and will provide their thoughts and views on the future directions of air quality regulation in California.

Session 24: Climate Change and International Law—What’s Next After Paris?

The international community has been working on legal frameworks to address climate change for nearly 25 years. These efforts have culminated most recently in the landmark agreement adopted in December 2015 in Paris, which commits countries to a goal of keeping anthropogenic warming to “well below” 2°C—although without traditionally enforceable legal mechanisms to ensure that this goal is achieved. This panel will examine the strengths and shortcomings of the Paris Agreement, what it means for the United States and other countries, and how public and private actors are responding in subnational regions like California.

Session 25: CEQA Practitioner Roundtable: Help! What now? Approaches for Analyzing Climate Change Impacts (Limited to 60 People)

Methods for analyzing greenhouse gases under CEQA have become less certain in the wake of the Supreme Court’s decision in Center for Biological Diversity v. Cal. Dep’t of Fish & Wildlife (Newhall Land & Farming), the Governor’s 2015 Executive Order, and 2015 state legislation on climate change. Further complicating the picture are two-year bills pending in the Legislature to set new greenhouse gas targets for 2030 and beyond, and the California Supreme Court’s pending decision in Cleveland Nat’l Forest Found. v. SANDAG. This practitioner-focused roundtable will explore various approaches for evaluating greenhouse gas emissions, climate change, and climate adaptation in this rapidly evolving area of the law.

Session 26: Water Rights Reforms—Are Changes Needed to Our Water Rights and Pricing Systems?

California’s historic drought has generated debate about how water should be allocated as well as new proposals for reform. In 2015, the Legislature enacted changes beefing up water measurement requirements for surface water diverters, and strengthening the state’s enforcement authority. More expansive water rights reforms have been proposed. Litigation is also ongoing that challenges water rates created to encourage water conservation, which potentially conflict with constitutional and other limitations on rate setting. This panel explores whether major changes to our water rights and water pricing systems are desirable, and if so, what they may be.

Session 27: Environmental and Economic Impacts of California’s Bold New Cannabis Future

California’s new “Medical Cannabis Regulation and Safety Act,” effective January, 2018, creates a broad statutory scheme regulating cannabis, issuing multiple environmental and other mandates, and carrying enormous economic consequences across the state. This panel seeks to explore the magnitude of change that the MCRSA and its mandates may bring to California’s economy, with a particular focus on the implications for environmental regulation and enforcement.

Scholarship information—The 2016 Yosemite Scholarships Have Been Awarded

The State Bar Environmental Law Section is pleased to offer the Michael H. Remy Scholarship.

In his nearly thirty years of private practice, Michael Remy represented a wide variety of public and private clients as well as nonprofit organizations. Michael assisted large corporations and small entrepreneurs alike in various permitting and environmental matters throughout the state. Many counties, cities, and special districts relied on Remy's counsel in the processing, environmental review, and litigation of large and small projects. Some of his most notable environmental accomplishments were: heading the successful political and legal efforts to shut down the Rancho Seco Nuclear Power Plant; and representing the Sierra Club and William Hewlett against the conversion of Shirley Canyon to a commercial ski run by the Squaw Valley Ski Corporation. In 1990, the Environmental Council of Sacramento named Remy "Environmentalist of the Year." Remy was widely admired and loved by his colleagues, friends and family, who regarded him as a man of extraordinary intelligence, personal integrity, kindness, and generosity. Remy's warm presence is sorely missed by everyone at Remy Moose Manley, LLP, but even in his absence, his memory continues to provide guidance and inspiration.

This scholarship, sponsored by Remy Moose Manley, LLP in memory of former Environmental Law Section member and advisor, Michael H. Remy, includes tuition, travel and room for the 2016 Environmental Law Conference at Yosemite®. Five (5) scholarships were awarded.
